THE PREACHERS.

THEY DISCUSS VARIOUS TOPICS IN VARIOUS WAYS.

Dedication of St. Vincent's Church—Dr. Cantine Talks of Temptation, Dr. Wells of Church Going and Dr. Chichester of Judgment.

The dedication of the new Catholic Church recently erected on the corner of Washington street and Grand avenue, in conjunction with the new St. Vincent's College, took place yesterday, the services commencing at 9:30 a.m. and concluding about noon. Bishop O'Connell headed the line of priests and acolytes who marched about the edifice chanting the sacred service, and sprinkling holy water upon its outer walls.

The choir sang Kyrie and Gloria from Hayden's Third, and the rest of the mass from Hayden's Sixteenth. The offertory piece was O Salutaris, quartette, by Costa. The choir was composed of the following: Mrs. O. W. Childs, soprano; Mrs. J. J. Schaller, contralto; G. T. Stamm, tenor; J. J. Schaller, bass; Prof. Knell, organist; Heine Quartette; Prof. Lenzberg; flute; Mr. Foxley, cornet.

Bishop O'Connell sang pontifical mass. Very Rev. John Adams, V. G., was assistant priest. Father Goudon was deacon, and Father Smith sub-deacon. Rev. F. S. Antill officiated as master of ceremonies. The following clergy were present in the sanctuary: Bishops Seldensburg of Minnesota, Father Bonaparte of Detroit, A. J. Mayer, C. M.; M. Dyer, C. M.; J. Cooney, C. M.; J. J. Murray, C. M.; J. E. A. Linn, C. M.

The sermon was preached by the Rev. Father Morgan, of the parish of Wilmington, who took for his text: "The Lord has sanctified His tabernacle, because this is the house of God, in which His name shall be invoked, of which it is written, and my name shall be there, saith the Lord."

"These words of Holy Writ," said Father Morgan, "find their application in the solemnity of this day, when you have gathered together within this new church to see it dedicated to the service of God, under the patronage of St. Vincent de Paul, the father and founder of the congregation of zealous priests to whom the Catholics of Los Angeles owe this beautiful structure."

"You have seen our venerable Bishop, the highest representative of God's authority in the diocese, accompanied by priests and acolytes, amidst the chanting of psalms and litaniae, solemnly bless, outside and in the walls of this new edifice. This ceremony, the baptism or christening of the building, has separated it from all other uses but that of divine service; has dedicated it to God; has sanctified it; because, in future, like all other Catholic churches, this Church of St. Vincent shall be called and shall be in reality the house of God. The Lord hath sanctified His tabernacle because this is the house of God. This is the house of God. I come to claim for it your respect, your veneration, your love."

Father Morgan then questioned why this is called the house of God, and concluded that it was not because sacraments, services, and prayers were here performed, because these could all be offered acceptably elsewhere; but he declared that every Catholic church is the house of God because it is the special place where the supreme act of the Christian religion—holiness—is offered to God every day; because Jesus, the God who made man in the sacrament of His love, makes it His home and dwells here day and night.

"There are people, descendants of those whose faith in the sacrifice of the mass, built those magnificent churches that are still the pride and glory of every country of the Old World; there are people calling themselves believers in Jesus Christ who do not believe in the sacrifice of the mass, because their ancestors, 800 years ago, in days of fanciful mystery, pulled down the altars where holy mass had been celebrated for 1500 years, styled the mass, in one of the articles of their new creed, an abominable idolatry, and reduced their religion to the bare recital of prayers and the singing of hymns—a religion without a sacrifice—very pagans will reproach them for the absurdity, for, though their sacrifice to false gods, they show by their sacrifices they know that a religion without sacrifice is no religion at all. O, would that the members of the many sects that have fallen off from the old mother church could only see that, having no sacrifice they cannot properly glorify God!"

"The sacrifice is the oblation or offering of some tangible thing, made to God by a lawful minister, with a sacred rite, in order to acknowledge by the destruction or change of the thing offered the sovereign dominion of God over all creatures, and our subjection to Him."

The speaker then gave the history of sacrifice from the earliest recorded times down to the self-sacrifice of Jesus upon the cross.

"What was required by God as essential to true religion before the sacrifice of the cross, still remains essential in the perfect religion of Christ. He only changed the figurative sacrifice into a real sacrifice. He substituted His body and His blood—sacrificed them on the cross—and that real sacrifice of Christ shall be continued, though without shedding of blood, in His true religion to the end of the world. The same God-man, at once High Priest and victim, shall fulfill the office of His eternal priesthood, as St. Paul tells us, and shall offer on the altar of His true church, by the hands of his chosen ministers, the same blood shed then for men, but in an unbloody manner, under the appearance of bread and wine."

The speaker then discussed the sacrifice of the Jews, and showed that it had been superseded and set aside by the sacrifice of Christ. He referred to the Mohammedan faith, and to the numerous sects of Protestantism, and showed that theirs was none of them, the true religion, because they have no sacrifice.

Father Morgan then appealed to the scriptures, to show the divine authentication of the sacrifice as perpetuated by the Catholic church, and concluded as follows:

"Experience proves that they who give generously and lovingly to the support of God's house are blessed by God in this world as in the next. To love God's house is a sign of predestination. 'I have loved the beauty of Thy house,' says the royal prophet: 'Thou wilt not lose my soul with the wicked.' You will have loved His dwelling on earth. He will take you to dwell forever with Him in Paradise."

The grand windows of the new church are all donations. The following are the memorial windows: Main window, Teresa Garvey; side windows, P. Watson, Dr. V. Gelcich, Mrs. M. Ganahl, Mr. Fitzgerald, Peter Wilson, Peter Donahue, Mr. Spittley, Miss Kerrie Conlan, Minnie Conlan, P. Brady, B. Reeve. There are also gift windows from Mrs. Dillon and Mrs. Kanealy, G. T. Stamm, George Kerkhoff, Mr. Ponet, Mrs. W. H. Nordholt, Miss M. Crimmins, Mrs. B. Wilson, Mrs. Huber.

The statue and crucifix over the high altar are the gifts of Mrs. V. Ponet. They were imported from Paris. The stations of the cross to be used in the church are being painted in Europe by a celebrated artist, and will be the gift of Mrs. O. W. Childs.

FORT-STREET METHODIST.

Rev. R. S. Cantine Talks About Temptation.

I Cor., 10, 13: "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man. God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able, but with the temptation make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it."

The word temptation in the text signifies try, prove, test. Two propositions:

I. Temptation is common to all men. II. There is a way of escape provided, and no man need yield.

I. Temptation common to man.

All men are tempted. There is no exemption. There is a class of religionists who claim they are so holy they have not been tempted for years—as though there was any advantage to a man from that condition. In the first place, it is not true; in the second, it could be a disadvantage if it was true. Do you not know we are all equally only in proportion as we resist temptation—as we stand under trial? Hence, the Apostle has given us this as one of the sources of our rejoicing: "Count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations," and he gives the reason as one who knows, because "the trial of your faith is more precious than gold when tried in the fire," not tried to temptation, but to fight it and rejoice in it, is the glory of a man.

There are some people who will tell you, "you must overcome temptation by keeping out of the way of it." So the way to keep from trial is to go into seclusion, shut yourself into your closet, keep away from the rushing, busy crowd, never come in contact with sinners, and so "keep yourself unspotted from the world." Judge, I'd as soon be a putty man, as such an one. Such a course is utterly inconsistent with the gospel of Christ, and contrary to the command of the Master. The church of God is an army, and every member a soldier, under orders to fight against sin. What would you think of an army in earthly conflict, sent out to capture a rebel host in a distant city. Who would go into a camp 50 miles away from the enemy he is expected to capture, and because he was afraid of the contagion in the ranks of the enemy, should refuse to move forward, and for a decade should spend the time of the entire army in polishing their arms, keeping busy from their uniforms, and otherwise improving themselves in the manual of arms. They would undoubtedly make pretty soldiers—the admiration of all the females in the city—but utterly useless for the purpose for which they were enlisted. Such is the condition of that soldier of Jesus, which fears the temptations which are common to all, and refuses to go out into battle to save himself from the danger of capture. "Ah, but," says me, "that's a hard way to do, that's the way I used to do when I first found the Savior, but I found it was vastly unpopular, and as I did not like to seem too forward and singular I just fell out of line. Go read the 17th of 1 Samuel, and you will find in the 29th verse the answer to your proposition, and when called into conflict answer the tempter, 'Is there not a cause?' and the Lord that delivered me out of the paw of the lion and out of the paw of the bear, He will deliver me." For He is faithful and there shall no temptation take you, but such as you are able. We are apt to think our trial peculiar to us. But I said temptation common to man, so come state your grievance. 1. "I'm tempted to horrid and gross evil, even to take my own life." Job had just such temptations. One of the purest men I ever knew, came to me one day and said "Lock me up, Cantine, and keep me away from my revolver," etc. 2. "I am tempted to rebel, or worse, perhaps, and often fear I am not acceptable of God." Well, perhaps this is not a temptation; perhaps you are not; you can tell if you want to. Read I. John, iii, 10, and you cannot long be in darkness as to your real condition; should it be a temptation, it is common to man. Abram, Isaac, Paul and Peter gave evidence of just such temptation.

3. "My property has been taken from me by members of the church and I am left in my old age without hope of regaining my fortune." For answer read Heb. x, 34-35. 4. "I am tempted to doubt the power and efficiency of prayer, and the more so because I have of late asked God for things I want very much and He has not given them to me." Read I. Cor., xii, 7-10. Now perhaps you only wished, or praying, perhaps God saw your selfish motive in asking and would not humor your wish. We are apt to ask for sugar-plums when God knows we need quinine. 5. "I am constantly in fear lest I shall fall from grace and shall be finally shut out of heaven." St. Paul, Mr. Wesley, Fletcher, Mr. Bramwell, Corvoso, Dr. Payson and Sumner, all gave expression to the same thought—"it is common." 6. "I have been compelled to leave my home, father, mother and family. I have been considered as vile, and an outcast without friends or home." Hear let me ask you read Mark x, 29-30. And then read the life of Mr. Wesley. Mobbed in the city, driven from the church, until the only place he could find was the grave of his father—he bore the reproach of the cross, and who is there among you would not willingly share his reward today?

II. Just a word in regard to the faithfulness of God: "God is faithful," asserts the Apostle. God cannot be otherwise and hold the government of the world. One act of unfaithfulness would incur rebellion in heaven. Now, this faithfulness is pledged in defense of his tried people. 1. Temptation proportioned to your strength. "Who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able to bear." "He knows your frame, He remembereth that you are dust." 2. "He will make a way of escape." See Abraham as he stands by the side of his altar on Moriah, upon which lays his sacrifice, Isaac, his son—"lay not thy hand upon the lad," etc. 3. Until his people are delivered, they shall have strength to bear it. So the faithful soldier goes forth to battle singing:

"When through fiery trials thy pathway shall lie,
My grace all sufficient shall be thy supply;
The flame shall not hurt thee. I only design
Thy dress to consume and thy gold to refine."

The soul that on Jesus hath leaned for repose;
I will not, I will not desert to his foes.
That soul, though all hell should endeavor to shake,
I'll never, no never, no never forsake."

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. A. J. Wells Discusses Church Going.

Psalm 122, 1: "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the House of the Lord." In a day when many forsake the sanctuary and treat it as an outgrown institution, it is pertinent to ask about the relation to individual and general needs.

1. As a sinful being, man needs the help of the House of God. David did. He speaks of it with a fine emotion. He was a man of genius, with a superb intellect and a poet's heart. In his relish for natural beauty he might stand beside Ruskin or Wordsworth in the tenderness and breadth of his sympathy, beside Coleridge and Goethe, while in his recoil from evil, "Cover," it has been said, "was not more sensitive, nor George Herbert of purer aspiration." He had sinned, indeed, but like Launcelot he felt that it mars his life.

Another sunning on such heights with one foot on the earth and all the world had been the sleeper for it.

But David's love for truth and honor, though blighted is not killed, and the pulse of moral earnestness beats through the pain and shame of his fall. He goes to the sanctuary to find God and he found of Him. He utters his confession and the ages hear the sob of his sorrow. There he strove to be a better man—there, where all the associations and services were helpful, and he found such inspiration as held his heart in glad triumph all his days.

2. As a worshipping creature man needs the house of God. The Son of Man used it. "At Nazareth, He went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day, as his custom was."

He turned to the village sanctuary. He who was mightiest and purest among the sons of men; He to whom the Father was a better sanctuary than He could find, turned to nothing higher than the stated place of worship, and stood with His human brothers in the "during time of human sentiment and conviction—that conviction which, sooner or later, forces itself home upon every human soul, that it wants God, that it must find Him, and that, if there be anywhere on earth places where the currents of this life are stronger or the voices of His love more audible," there the soul must be able to abide.

Are we wiser than he? Are our human needs unlike his? May not his custom be healthful to ours? But we are also to put ourselves in the currents of worship for the general good. What shall touch the world's moral life if the house of God be closed? But if you stay away because you prefer to, one way or another, and if the multitude do, then there is an end of worship. Can a general faith in God and the hereafter be maintained without the house of God? Can we hold fast to God, to His government, to our responsibility to Him and to the reality of moral distinctions? Remember the old gravitations of life—the action of downward-tending affinities. It has been hard to project men upward. History affirms that, and experience.

Now, shut up the churches and wait. Is it not certain that our morals would suffer? Would it not be ruinous? Is not the tendency of our life strongly toward the material side? Was not the picture of the drift of things, drawn by THE TIMES the other day, just? Business overruling Sunday, sweeping it away, then obliterating the night; the sound of human toll interrupted by no darkness, stilled by no holy rest day. Is not the drift in that direction? Will not this drift carry with it, after the Sabbath is swept away and the night turned into day, solely for gain and pleasure, loss of morals and mean disorder, wickedness, greed of gain, lust of pleasure, conflict of classes, the decay of homes and government? Make life a treadmill, reduce man to the level of a blind gin-horse, and solely in the interests of business and of a material civilization set him treading round and round the little circle of the life that now is until, like the beasts, something in the darkness draws their foreheads downward, and they stand, and you degrade man. What stands in the way of this tendency? What steadily resists this drift? The House of God.

Come a little nearer home. You neglect the church; you do not need it. Why? Do you maintain the spirit of a worshiper? I trow not. You are entangled in the things of time and sense, and forget that you belong to the world to come, and ought to be the child of liberty, of reason and of hope, "thinking," as Emerson says, "as spirits think who belong to the universe." To maintain the House of God is to confer on our kind one of the noblest boons, and the first element in such maintenance will be our personal presence.

JOHN C. BELL, Auctioneer.

o judge anybody, how are we to know on whom to rely, or with whom to associate? In fact, how is it possible for us to maintain any social order at all? If all judging is thus absolutely prohibited, what about the juryman rendering a verdict, or the employer discharging a dishonest servant, or the conscientious reformer lifting up his voice against wrong? Is it, indeed, true that Christ would have us pass through life as indifferent negative characters—entirely overlooking men's moral deficiencies? Does he want us to be entirely neutral and non-committal in our opinions of those about us?

Such questions prove that when Christ here enjoins us to "judge not," he cannot mean all that the words imply. Some one has said "the judicial element in our nature is the judicious."

This divine faculty of moral discrimination is one of our great distinguishing prerogatives as rational beings. It is only the animal that can't pass moral judgments, but man can and ought. No human being can live and avoid judging, for to think is to judge, every little trivial affirmation carrying a judgment with it. And then judging is in the exact line of scripture precept. For the Bible most explicitly teaches that it is a crime to be indifferent to moral actions, saying "Woe unto them that call evil good and that put darkness for light."

And this is just the trouble with society to say that so many are indifferent and refuse to exercise that healthful, vigorous judgment a corrupt age calls for—"evil in the world being ever made up a third part of the audacity of the wicked and the other two-thirds of the cowardliness of the so-called righteous, who leave evil unchecked." And now if all this is true, the question is, What does our Lord mean by exhorting people to "judge not?" We may get at the true meaning of this word judgment by referring to its uses elsewhere. In the 3d chapter of John we read: "God sent His son into the world to condemn the world; and the one who doeth the will of the Father, he shall not be judged, neither shall he come into condemnation, but he that doeth not the will of the Father, he shall be judged." And in the 12th chapter of John we have the same word again, when it says: "I came not to judge the world." That is to regard it in an unkind, hostile light. All of which makes it clear that when Christ here says "judge not," the judging he refers to is of the condemnatory, censorious sort. He doesn't mean that we are not to judge other people at all, but that we are not to judge them in a spirit of malevolence and be secretly eager to find them in fault. The spirit thus condemned is that spirit of self-righteous infallibility which has in all ages been the curse of society.

One good reason for not judging harshly of the actions of others is because we have such imperfect and fragmentary knowledge of those actions. No two spectators of any important or unimportant event give exactly the same account of it. But, on the contrary, they frequently give accounts that on their face seem absolutely contradictory, as, for example, where Matthew seems to conflict with Luke in narrating some event in the life of our Lord, or where Gen. Grant gives an entirely different version of a battle from that given by some other spectator.

Another reason for not indulging in censorious judging is because we can't estimate the true motives of those we judge. It is an accepted principle in ethics that the moral worth of any action always depends very largely upon the intention that prompted it. A seemingly virtuous action is sometimes vitiated because it springs from bad motives and so an action that in itself seems questionable and blameworthy may be found to be exactly the reverse when we understand what led to it.

The last reason given for not judging harshly is that such judging is sure to recoil upon those who indulge in it. "With what judgment ye judge ye shall be judged." Which is an application to the moral world of what naturalists call the law of elasticity and recoil. Or, in theological terms, its nothing more nor less than retribution.

Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. This law is true for society. Kindness to those about us begetting kindness and cruelty begetting cruelty.

The suspicious man is suspected.

The bitter man is hated, and as Ismail's hand is against every man, so every man's hand is against him.

None of us are immaculate; and very often when we are looking after the "splinter" in our brother's eye, there's a great big "rafter" in our own eye. "Thou art inexcusable, O man! whoever thou judgest; for thou that judgest another doest the same thing." Let us be kinder, therefore, to one another, and more tender-hearted and pitiful and meek. Yea, let us judge not, but rather let us love.

For the way is growing dreary, And the feet are often weary, And the heart is often sad; And there's a heavy burden-bearing, When it seems that none are caring, And we half forget that ever we were glad.

LOS ANGELES extends a hearty welcome to the members of the Grand Army, who open their annual State encampment here this week. The delegations arriving yesterday found many old friends and comrades to welcome them, and their stay in town will undoubtedly be rendered pleasant. The representation from distant points is considered remarkably full and satisfactory. The encampment will organize today, adjourn over tomorrow—Washington's birthday—for an excursion to Monrovia, and, about Wednesday, will get down to business.

Unto Kinney the Things that be Kinney's.

THE TIMES is in receipt of the following note:
 LOS ANGELES, Feb. 20, 1887.—[To the Editor of THE TIMES.] Apparently somebody seems to be having a thorn in his side over our naming the mountain peak after your distinguished citizen, Abbot Kinney. The action of the Government in its recognition of the great services of the gentleman, as the official head of the Board of Forestry of California, is seeking to preserve the water sources and timber lands from spoliation and appropriation by lawless parties.

A recognition of the distinguished services of Citizen Abbot Kinney would be all right, coming from the Government or from any other source, were it accomplished without an act of vandalism. But when an effort is made to set aside a time-honored and universally-recognized name in favor of a new one which contains a Sandwich Island graft upon the cognomen of Citizen Kinney, the proposition becomes odious in the extreme.

Don Benito Wilson was in his day one of the foremost citizens of Los Angeles county and of Southern California. He was a pioneer among pioneers, and a pathmaker no less than a pathfinder. He was noted for his successful enterprises, and his rugged integrity. He reared one of the first orange groves and planted one of the largest vineyards of San Gabriel and he established the first furniture factory in Southern California. He subdivided a considerable part of Pasadena (Lake Vineyard tract) and opened it for settlement. He was called into places of public and private trust and represented Los Angeles county in the State Legislature. Among his other enterprises he hewed out a trail to the summit of one of the notable peaks of the Sierra Madre chain, and brought out of the mountain fastness timber with which to build houses. Since that day the trail has been known as Wilson's Trail, and the mountain which it ascends has been called Wilson's Peak. These designations have been in use among the people of Southern California for upwards of thirty years. Old Don Benito Wilson earned them, not only by his services to the public as a pioneer and staunch citizen and representative, but by his direct enterprise in opening a pathway to the top of the mountain. This trail he left as a rich legacy of enjoyment for the generations who were to come after him, and many who have climbed the heights and looked upon the beautiful panorama below have blessed his memory.

Don Benito Wilson sleeps in the little churchyard at San Gabriel. A true history of his life would show that he never intentionally wronged any man to the value of anything. He never even tried to filch a good name or steal one jot or tittle of the honor due another man's memory. Such distinction as came to him during his long and useful life, came without his grasping after it.

If our correspondent "Surveyor" is one of the Government officials who is seeking to wrest away the name from the memory of old Don Benito Wilson, and place the conscripted honor upon the brow of Mr. Kinney, of Kinneyloa, let him think better of it. He will find that he is planting a thorn in the sides of a good many men in Los Angeles county and one that will prick deep.

As to Mr. Kinney himself, he must see that the distinction thus sought will be nothing short of odium. An honored name is not thus to be handed down to posterity. If he hungers and thirsts after a mountain, there are many other peaks in the Sierra Madre as yet unchristened. Let him build a trail to the summit of one of them and climb it and, with chisel in hand, let him cut deep into the face of its topmost granite rock the talismanic word "KINNEY-LOA." Then let him call in a party of Government surveyors to note the conquest and to inscribe the name upon the map; and a Government photographer to take a picture of the eminence, himself included. With such a fair, square and manly acquisition of fame the public will be in hearty sympathy, and loud peans of approbation will make the welkin ring. Kinneyloa Peak shall be a landmark for all the flat country of this end of the State, and shall be pointed to with interest by the people on shipboard far off the coast. And years hence, when Mr. Kinney shall be asleep in a little churchyard not far away, and some vandal hunter after fame shall seek to take away the name from Kinneyloa Mountain, THE TIMES, then drifted into an honorable and robust old age, and conducted by another generation of men, will champion his cause and hurl defiance into the very teeth of the despoiler. The cry will then be "Kinneyloa Mountain forever."

A Real-estate Exchange.

Some time ago THE TIMES suggested the feasibility of establishing a real-estate exchange in Los Angeles. In older and larger cities this sort of an organization has been found to work admirably, and to facilitate transactions in real estate as much as stock boards and produce, grain, oil and other exchanges facilitate dealings in those commodities. It seems that San Diego has gained the lead of Los Angeles in this respect, steps having been taken to establish a real-estate exchange there. The plan of the projectors is to keep an office open in a prominent part of the city, where owners can leave their property to be sold, the Exchange claiming the exclusive right of sale of such property, and accepting none placed in the hands of individual brokers. Lists of property will be issued each morning to members of the Exchange, and they are to sell it at the regular rate of commission—5 per cent. on the first $5000, 2 1/2 per cent. on excess over $5000 up to $10,000, and 2 per cent. on all excess over $10,000. The Exchange is to sell no property, but merely to accept the same for sale, and place it in the hands of every member, the first making the sale to be entitled to the full commission. The advantage of this organization, if it is well sustained, will be the aggregation of a great many pieces of real estate, and the presentation of the properties in a systematic way for the consideration of buyers. A man who has money to invest can obtain, in short order, a comprehensive idea of what is offered, and can take his own time and means of inspecting the properties. An advantage will also be gained by the brokers, as many entanglements resulting from the present hit-and-miss system or lack of system will be obviated. There need be few disputes as to the right of commissions, and, in case of adverse claims, they can be adjusted by a committee of arbitration appointed by the Exchange. There need be no more of the character of wildcat speculation about the Exchange than about any other commercial organization; those things are what the members make them, always. We would be glad to see the real-estate men of Los Angeles wake up on this subject, and place themselves abreast of modern methods.

A Contrast.

In 1847 war existed between the United States and Mexico. In 1870 war existed between Germany and France. The capital city of Mexico was taken and held by the American forces until the terms of peace were agreed upon. The capital of France was likewise taken and held by the Germans until peace was arranged between the two countries. The Americans obtained in their settlement with Mexico two almost unoccupied territories of the latter; namely, New Mexico and Upper California. In the settlement of the differences between Germany and France the former demanded two populous and rich provinces of the latter; namely, Alsace and Lorraine. But here comes the difference. The American Government exacted from Mexico no indemnity for the war, but paid her fifteen million dollars for the two Territories. Germany made no allowance to France for the provinces taken, but exacted the enormous sum of one thousand million dollars, or five thousand million francs, as indemnity for the war.

The difference thus displayed by the United States and Germany toward the subjugated is certainly very marked. Mexico was a much less enlightened nation than France, but was treated with much more consideration, not to say humanity, by its conquerors. The time has been in the history of the world when subjugated peoples were led captive and reduced to slavery. Germany did not pursue exactly that course toward France, but her exactions were in the nature of a demand of servitude from the conquered race.

Germany and France are bristling up toward each other again, and it all comes from the unsatisfactory terms of the last settlement. No such feeling exists between the United States and Mexico. They fought, and then adjusted their differences in a manner to leave no ground for complaint or hard feeling.

The Reporter's Mistake.

THE TIMES endeavours, at all times, and in all circumstances, to be a truthful paper, but finds it hard now and then to keep up with the plain truth in this remarkable climate. It announced yesterday morning that at 1 p. m. of Saturday the news of the most remarkable swindle ever perpetrated in Los Angeles had penetrated every spot in the city except the Express office. The statement was made in good faith, but due regard for truth compels its retraction this morning. There was just one other cranny within the corporate limits into which the news didn't leak. That was the Tribune office. It is just possible, though, that the Tribune did hear of the great swindle, and suppressed the news from motives of delicacy. That "splendid army of patrons," which pays good money to the Tribune in expectation of getting a newspaper, might feel that the Tribune was getting a little personal if the Tribune talked about suckers, who were roped in by the lesser brass-jewelry swindle.

Baltimore and Ohio Officials Censured for the Republic Disaster.

Suspension of a Dakota Bank—Review of the Situation in Corn and Wheat—Secretary Lamar Decides a Los Angeles Land Case.

By Telegraph to The Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—[By The Associated Press.] The Times' Lincoln (Neb.) special says: "The damage to telegraph wires has made the task of collecting the details of the late storm in Colorado and Western Nebraska very slow and tedious. As the news comes in it shows that the disturbance was the worst in the history of the region affected by it. The storm raged in the mountains and descended upon the plains. These had been dry and free from moisture so long that dust and sand mingled with the snow in resistless torrents. Neither man nor beast could stand before the rush. This compound filled the shallow cuts level full and effectually blocked the tracks. Fortunately the cuts are shallow and snowplows were able to clear them out. The roof of the Burlington roundhouse at Akron was blown off. West of McCook two men were picked up dead and another so badly frozen and exhausted that his life is despaired of. Many other fatalities are expected when reports come in from the territory distant from the railroad. Passengers and train men saw cattle in droves buried to their heads in snow. Hardly a horse was to be seen. The eastern edge of the storm was entirely covered. Most of those seen will perish. In fact, all except the small force can be found and dug out by the few men available for that purpose will be lost. The loss of cattle will be something appalling. The storm covered the entire range on the east side of the Rocky Mountains from the British line to New Mexico. The eastern edge lay across Nebraska to the North Platte and McCook. East of these points no damage was done. Unless the stories are exaggerated not less than 25 per cent. of all the cattle on the range are wiped out."

THE REPUBLIC DISASTER.

The Coroner's Report Censures Baltimore and Ohio Officials.

PITTSBURGH (Pa.), Feb. 20.—[By The Associated Press.] The Post's Times (O.) special says: The investigation of the great Baltimore and Ohio wreck of January 4th has drawn to an end finally and tomorrow morning the verdict will be rendered by Coroner Sepper. The verdict is a very lengthy document, of which the following is a synopsis from an advance copy received tonight: The Coroner first finds that William Frederick, of Holgate, O.; J. M. Francis and Frank Irvin, of Black Hand, O.; W. S. Peirce, of Wheeling, W. Va.; Joseph Postlethwaite, Henry Postlethwaite and Spencer Postlethwaite, of Wetzel county, W. Va.; M. H. Parks, of Washington, D. C.; Frank D. Boyer, of Mechanicsburg, Pa.; David Ober, of Oberlin, Pa.; Thomas O. Pemberton, of Payne, O.; Aloy B. Lee, of Penfield, Ill.; J. S. Gartner, of Mechanicsville, Iowa; and others, whose names are unknown, came to their death by a collision on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, one and a half miles west of the village of Republic, on January 4, 1887. He also finds that freight engine No. 923 was in an unsafe and unserviceable condition, and that the officials of the road had been notified of this fact, but still allowed it to be used; that the engineer of the freight train, Edward S. Kiler, was not intoxicated, as charged, but was worn out with sixteen hours and fifty minutes' continued duty, with a green fireman and a porter; that he had plenty of time to get to Republic from the Seneca siding, thirty-eight minutes for the ten miles, but his engine was so poor and leaked so that the fire was put out, and it died on the track; that the conductor of the freight, L. F. Fletcher, failed in his duty in not flagging the limited express; that the brakes on the express were inferior and inefficient for the train; that the express was so loaded that it failed to diminish the speed of forty-three miles an hour more than one-half in a distance of 1000 feet; that the manner of heating and lighting the cars of the express was inferior, unsafe and dangerous; that contrary to the laws of the State of Ohio; that had the lighting and heating been proper the cars would not have been burned and the loss of life would have been very light. The report concludes as follows: "We therefore find that the above persons came to their death through gross negligence on the part of the officials and managers of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and through the gross negligence of Conductor L. F. Fletcher in failing to signal the express train and through gross negligence on the part of the owners, managers and officials of the Baltimore and Ohio Railway Company for using on said express train inferior and ineffective brakes; also for using an improper, dangerous and unlawful manner of lighting and heating the cars of said express. It would seem that such negligence resulting in such great loss of life could not be other than criminal, but there are no laws in Ohio making such negligence a crime and no laws under which such can be charged with crime."

CROP REPORTS.

Outlook for Wheat in the Mississippi Valley.

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—[By The Associated Press.] This week's Farmers' Review crop summary is as follows: "Injury to winter wheat by reason of the recent sleet storms and accompanying cold weather is reported from various portions of Illinois, Indiana, Missouri and Kansas, but the general situation as affecting the prospects of winter wheat continue to be favorable. In Hamilton, Hardin and Kane counties, Ill., the outlook is regarded as precarious, with many of the fields covered with frozen sleet. Fields in Michigan and Wisconsin are nearly all covered, and reports are uniformly favorable. Reports from a few winter wheat counties of Iowa and Minnesota are generally good. The corn movement is free in Ohio and Indiana, but is very light in all other western States. In Minnesota and Missouri there is very little corn for shipment, and the movement is very light. Many Iowa and Illinois counties are barren of corn, and are importing corn at from 35 to 40 cents per bushel. The roads are badly blocked throughout Dakota and very little grain of any kind is moving to the market."

A Dakota Bank Suspends.

DEADWOOD (Dak.), Feb. 20.—The Merchants' National Bank did not open yesterday morning. The branches at Central City and Sturgis were also closed, but the Spear Fish branch remains open. No statement of the present condition of the bank is obtainable, but in the last statement published, December 28th, the liabilities exceeded $485,000, with resources about the same. It is thought that the bank will finally pay dollar for dollar.

A Los Angeles Land Case.

BILLS BEFORE CONGRESS.

The Work as Mapped Out for the Rest of the Session.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—[By The Associated Press.] The probable course of legislation by the Senate for the coming week, and, in fact, the remainder of the session, may be adjudged by reference to the arrangement agreed upon by the caucus committees on both sides and ratified by the two caucuses last week. This arrangement is subject to change by agreement between Senators Harris and Sherman, chairmen respectively of the caucus committees, who are authorized to confer and amend the order business, but inasmuch as it has been reached with due deliberation, it is likely to remain substantially as it now stands. It contemplates a rigid devotion of the morning hours until 2 o'clock of each day to the consideration of miscellaneous minor matters upon the calendar which are not otherwise provided for and which do not promise to give rise to extended debate. Carrying out this part of the programme, bills which have passed the House and have been reported favorably from the Senate committee will have precedence. After 2 o'clock appropriation bills will have sway so long as any remain upon the calendar. So far the arrangement is liable to interruption only by the presentation of and action upon conference reports, which are always in order, and by pension bills, general and special, which, though possessing no inherent rights, are by the predilections of both sides to be accorded special privileges when circumstances permit.

The remaining time of the daily sessions is to be devoted to selected measures of general legislation, substantially in the following order: Nicaragua Canal Bill; resolution for an investigation of Pacific Railroad accounts; bill creating Department of Agriculture; bill for relief of depositors in Freedman's Bank; Pleuro-pneumonia Bill (if it shall be reported from the Committee on Agriculture at time); Arbitration (Labor) Bill, and any land-grant forfeiture bills; bill to prohibit the use of mails by newspapers publishing lottery advertisements; Des Moines Land Grant Bill; bill authorizing suits to be brought in certain cases against the United States; bill to settle private land claims in certain States and Territories; bill to reimburse certain States for moneys expended in the purchase of land; bill to establish an international copyright system and bill to quiet certain land titles. The list first prepared by the Republic is understood to have contained the bill to authorize the Pacific railroads to build branches, but it appears to have been stricken out by the Democrats, while the Pacific Railroad resolution, at the suggestion of the House, was taken from the rear end of the list and placed near the head. It is not deemed probable that the remaining time of the session will be sufficient to complete the entire list. The River and Harbor Appropriation Bill will probably be finished tomorrow, and the District of Columbia and Military Academy Bills, both of which are on the calendar, are expected to follow in their turn. Agricultural and diplomatic appropriation bills are before the Committee on Appropriations, and are expected to be reported in time for action during the week.

The President's veto of the Dependent Pension Bill is set for consideration on Thursday. The remainder of the week will undoubtedly be devoted to consideration of appropriation bills and conference bills. The last six days of the present Congress begins on Friday and it will then be in order to move to pass any measure by a two-thirds vote under suspension of the rules. The House on Tuesday night 3 o'clock, will adjourn until 3 o'clock, when it will adjourn upon the late Senator Pike will be in order. On Wednesday the Fisheries Retaliatory Bills will be called up, and lively debate is expected.

A PYRAMID OF FORTUNE.
 Several Hundred Hogs Preserved in the Cold Climate of Missouri.

"On this day of the sudden freeze Andy was driving 300 or 400 hogs to St. Louis, and had got down near Carlinville, Macoupin county, when the blizzard lit onto 'em. The men had to run off an' leave the hogs an' their wagons, an' two of the horses were frozen to death in their tracks. The men managed to get into Carlinville, several of 'em badly frozen. The people there took good care of 'em, an' next day a party rode out to look up the hogs. Well, sir, the sight that met their eyes was a queer one. They found them hogs all in a pile in a regular pyramid—and that pyramid was 'bout forty feet high. Well, twar as true as gospel. Andy told me so himself, an' he was a truthful man. You see, the hogs huddled together to keep warm. Those on the outside were cold, and kept trying to get further in, while those on the inside were smotherin' 'n' fightin' the fresh air, an' not knowin' how to get it. The result of all this was that the hogs in the middle were forced up by the pressure from outside an' below, and as more hogs got their noses under the outer edge of the pyramid an' kept roostin' to'd the center, the porkers in the middle kept risin' an' risin' till the topmost one was a full forty feet from the ground. Every hog in that drove was in that pyramid, an' every tarnation one of 'em was frozen stiffer'n a poker."

The Hyperborean Belt Booming Way Up the Sides of Shasta—Another Storm Coming—"Pete," the Agile Murderer, Still Kissing His Partners.

By Telegraph to The Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 20.—[By The Associated Press.] The steamer Zealandia arrived this morning from Australia and was immediately boarded by Deputy Collector Fogarty for the purpose of searching the vessel for Australian rabbits, which it was reported the vessel would bring to this port and which are a terrible pest in Australia, where they breed with extraordinary rapidity and destroy all vegetation. It was feared that if these animals were allowed to land they would make havoc with the fruit trees, vines and wheat fields of this State. The lower house of the Legislature, aware of these facts, adopted a resolution authorizing the immediate killing of the rabbits on their arrival and further action in the matter is contemplated. Deputy Collector Fogarty searched the Zealandia, but a diligent investigation failed to reveal the presence of any of the obnoxious animals.

MURDER WILL OUT.

Death-bed Confession of a Murderer Committed Eight Years Ago.

THE DALLIES (Or.), Feb. 20.—[By The Associated Press.] Carlton Force, who some time since purchased a ranch in Cook county, writes that the man from whom he bought the ranch died recently, and on his death-bed confessed to having with two others murdered an old lady near Oregon City a number of years ago for money. He has led a most miserable existence, imagining that he was haunted by her specter and was worn to a shadow. He met death as a welcome relief. The woman murdered was probably Mrs. Hager, whose killing near Oregon City and the robbery of her house caused great excitement in 1879, and for which a young man was convicted on circumstantial evidence and is now serving a life sentence in the State Penitentiary.

Letters were received from the Oakland Board of Trade, stating that 30 families from the East are en route for the Livermore Valley, and many others are to follow, for the purpose of engaging in olive and vine growing. Numerous strangers are visiting the valley in quest of locations.

In the Orange Orchard.
 What plenty of amber light
 Floods all the air this breezy morn!
 The woods are choral, and it seems
 As though, within a land of dream,
 I heard from every windy height
 A feathered Orpheus sound his liquid horn.
 Like tiny harvest moons I see,
 Amid the leaves that shake and shine,
 The luscious, ripened fruitage glow;
 The little chameleons, as they go,
 Change in the sunlight fitfully
 From greens and grays to hues like ruddy wine.

The jasmine blossoms are as sweet
 As those in Samarcand of yore,
 At day-dawn by the terrace stair,
 When Zarie plucked them for her hair,
 Then ran to find, with eager feet,
 Her waiting lover by the postern door.

We act the same old scene today—
 The lover I and she the hour—
 Hasten, haste, my sweet, the moments
 Speed!
 Time pauses not howe'er we plead.
 Behold, she threads the orchard way,
 Within her hair a fresh-plucked jasmine flower.

Gigantic Scheme to Control the Meat Supply of the Metropolis—A Syndicate with $25,000,000 Preparing to Buy Out Every Butcher and Meat Dealer.

By Telegram to The Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—[By the Associated Press.] The belief that Dr. McGlynn will be reinstated in St. Stephen's Church was the topic of conversation among the parishioners of the church today. It is said that Dr. McGlynn has received letters not only from many priests of the Roman Catholic church in this country and in Europe, but also letters from several cardinals and bishops, commending his course and approving his strength of purpose in holding to his opinions on property in land, which are, they say, consistent with the doctrines of the church. The theory now entertained by Dr. McGlynn's friends is that he will be reinstated as pastor of St. Stephen's; that he will return to his home in the rectory, and that he will then go to Rome. He will never go to Rome, it is said, unless he goes as pastor of St. Stephen's. The reinstatement of the Doctor, it is believed, will take place before April 10th, which is Easter Sunday. Dr. McGlynn's health is steadily improving, and he now goes out daily. The masses were not largely attended today, and the collections were small.

BATTING FOR BEEF.

A Big Syndicate Trying to Control Gotham's Meat Market.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—[By the Associated Press.] The Mail and Express says: "A big fight is at hand and the prize is the meat supply of New York city. Three opposing armies have been planning and struggling during the past year against each other. Each possesses ammunition to the amount of $50,000,000. Slight skirmishes have been fought during the last few months followed by a lull during the week just passed. However, a scheme has been unearthed, which for boldness of enterprise is unparalleled in the history of the cleaver. The National Consumers' Meat Company is its author and has succeeded in surprising its foes, the Chicago dressed beef men and the city slaughterers and Chicago men. Thus it proposes to win the retail butchers to its side by purchasing every shop in New York for cash by making the proprietor a stockholder in the company and retaining him as manager of the business transferred. The company, of course, will supply all the stores with its own meat, and owning every retail establishment in the city, there will be no outlet for the city's meat. This means the total abolition of city slaughterers and of all shipments of Chicago dressed beef to New York. The movement, it will be seen, is a very bold one."

The Marquis de Moers, who is general of the "consumers' forces, is very confident of success, though reluctant at present to disclose the details of the scheme in question. "Our plan," he said yesterday, "is to sell at wholesale to retail butchers, as seems to be the general impression. We desire to bring our stock direct to the consumer. Our company is to be organized, and another very large syndicate, and, having abundant capital, we propose to buy up every retail butcher store in this city, either for cash or stock. If our negotiations are not successful, why we can open up three or four hundred independent retail shops. We first desire to give every retail butcher a chance to dispose of his business. The city slaughterers cannot be expected to survive their journey, and can be seen daily in their pens among the orange trees at the bottom of the grounds."

COL. WOODFORD.

His Gospel Temperance Meeting Last Night.

The Congregational Church was crowded with people last night, to hear the noted temperance evangelist, Col. George Woodford. The lecturer, a well-known figure in the saloon business, a terrible armament and held out to the victim of temperance means of escape. His text was, "Arise, take up thy couch, and go into thine own house; and he took up that whereon he lay, and departed, glorifying God."

The speaker held out the gospel as the solvent of all hard problems, and gospel temperance as the basis for prohibitory enactments, declaring that the gospel is to good government what the foundation is to the building. The pained man's friends bore him up and their faith prompted them to carry their burden to the house-top and lower it before the Savior.

By telling numerous illustrations he impressed upon his hearers the importance of starting right, and with the eloquence of him who knows from experience he depicted the thralldom of him who through heredity or habit had fallen under the wheels of this our national juggernaut. He pictured the saloonist on this inscription on their doors: "No drunks wanted here; they are our worst enemies," and wound up with this pathetic question: When in the name of heaven, earth or hell, is the drunkard wanted, or where is he of service?

Very many signed the pledge and donated the blue, or would have done so had not the blue ribbons given out. Col. Woodford will hold forth in the Congregational Church every evening this week, exercises beginning at 7:30, sharp.

A PANORAMA.

Another Attraction at Washington Gardens.

Messrs. Cawston & Fox, the proprietors of the ostrich farm at Washington Gardens, have made arrangements for having located at their grounds the famous panorama of the Battle of Gettysburg. The picture was painted for the New Orleans Exposition at a cost of $250,000, and is considered one of the finest in the United States. The building, which will measure 90 feet in diameter, will be commenced early this week and the panorama will be opened to the public in about a fortnight. The ostriches, 41 in number, have now quite recovered from the effects of their journey, and can be seen daily in their pens among the orange trees at the bottom of the grounds.

BERLIN BUDGET.

Probable Results of the Coming Elections—Military Preparations. BERLIN, Feb. 20.—[By Cable.] There is a pause in the intensity of the electoral conflict pending Monday's polling. The committees everywhere continue active, but there is a momentary lull in public agitation.

There is also a significant subsidence in war rumors. This, the opposition say, because the government no longer considers such allment necessary to excite the electors. Although official circles are sure of victory they are much less confident that their majority will be large. Their most sanguine estimates increase the number of Conservatives from 75 to 85 and the National Liberals from 50 to 60, and reduce the Freisinniger from 67 to 50, leaving the other sections about the same as before. The septennate majority is dependent upon the split in the center party in which, it is calculated, there are 60 Freisinniger against 30 Septennists. If this estimate is realized and the government fails to obtain a submissive majority for all its purposes the new Reichstag will vote for the Military Bill, but will be equally ready as was the last Reichstag to resist Bismarck in his projects for securing permanent supplies. The Socialists hope to return 34 candidates—10 more than in the last Reichstag. The Progressives are the only party with moderate expectations. They will be gratified if they retain their former force. The results of the elections will be definitely known on Tuesday night. It was reported that Prince Bismarck desired to convoke the Reichstag for February 28th, and will demand urgency for the Military Bill.

The ministerial order issued yesterday relative to calling out the army recruits for 1887 and 1888 provides that the men who receive permission to discontinue active service and enter the reserves will be determined at the latest on September 31st, while between the 1st and 5th of November the new infantry recruits will enter the ranks for drill.

A conference of the Railway Military Commission on mobilization has been held at Weisbaden, which was attended by delegates from all the German railways and by numerous army officers. Exhaustive arrangements for a scheme of transit were completed. Absolute secrecy is maintained regarding the plans formed.

AT THE VATICAN.

The Pope Still Seeking Diplomatic Relations With Russia. Rome, Feb. 20.—[By Cable.] It is stated that the Russian government in consequence of what it considers the Pope's excessive claims, has rejected the proposal to establish diplomatic relations with the Holy See. Cardinal Jacobini is still endeavoring to arrange the matter.

WORK OF THE PROPAGANDA. Cardinal Gibbons has been very busy since his arrival here. No definite information as to the business of the Propaganda is known, but it is certain that great questions touching Catholic interest in America will be considered carefully. Cardinal Gibbons is expected to express his opinion on questions submitted for his view because of his great acquaintance with the present American questions and his strong love of American institutions. It is difficult to believe that the conclusion reached will be of an unfavorable character. Time is still required for the settlements of cardinals in curia.

RAILROAD NOTES.

A Brilliant Instance of Unfair Discrimination.
(S. P. Chronicle.)

Unfair discrimination in railroad rates is shown by a paragraph in a Los Angeles paper, from which it appears that two carloads of onions recently arrived in that city from New York on a freight tariff of 60 cents per hundred pounds, while the same freight from San Francisco to Los Angeles would be 50 cents per hundred.

All the jargon of long-and-short haul, competitive points, value of service and all the rest of the stock railroad expressions cannot convince the people of this State that such rates as these are not an unjust and unreasonable discrimination in favor of the East and against California. No sane man can contend that the difference in the cost of transportation can be but 10 cents per hundred pounds, when the disparity in distance is so great. From San Francisco to Los Angeles is, in round numbers, 500 miles; from New York to Los Angeles is about 3000 miles. Onions carried at least six times as far, and yet only 10 cents more per hundred charged as freight. What wonder that the industries of California languish when such a state of things as this exists?

Congress has done wisely and well to take this matter in hand. We fancy that a few facts such as these will easily outweigh the sophistical arguments of the railroads against the Interstate Commissioners. We judge the most adroit traffic manager would have some difficulty in convincing such a man as Judge Thurman that if 60 cents were a just and reasonable rate from New York to Los Angeles, 50 cents would not be an exorbitant rate for the same kind of freight from San Francisco to Los Angeles.

If this discrepancy were confined to onions there would be no great harm done, for the importation of onions must be comparatively small. But it is not. The same kind of inequality, only differing in degree, runs all through freight schedules. The only definite rule is, all the traffic will bear which does not mean, as it should, such portion of the value of the merchandise shipped as will pay the carrier a fair return upon his investment and operating expenses, but all that can be wrung and squeezed out of the necessities of the consignee. A fair illustration of the railroad view of their doctrine is this: The railroad in ordinary times will assume, will carry quinine at the same rate as other drugs of like character; but if there should come an epidemic of malaria in a particular section and a supply of quinine was absolutely necessary, the railroad would feel warranted in raising the rate of freight on quinine tenfold because the afflicted section must have it and the traffic would bear it. Our illustration is a perfectly fair one of railroad ethics, and could undoubtedly be shown to exist in principle in hundreds of cases.

But if the Interstate Commission will do its duty, as we have no doubt it will, all this will be remedied. They cannot, we presume, prevent the railroad from hauling onions 3000 miles for 60 cents a hundred, but they can prevent the same road from charging 50 cents for hauling the same freight 500 miles.

Paste 'Em.

Paste, as a bug-killer, is gaining ground rapidly, and will probably be adopted by many of our orange growers as a means of ridding their trees of the pest. It is harmless to the tree and is certainly effective. Where black scale exists and the trees and fruit are smutty, the application of paste will pay well, simply to clean the fruit. It is sprayed on very thin—in fact, so thin that at first it is hardly perceptible to the naked eye, but it forms a complete covering over the fruit, limbs and twigs, and when it dries and comes off the smut and bugs come with it. The fruit is left clean and bright, and is worth double the price in the market that smutty fruit will bring. The proportions to use are given as follows: "One pound of flour made into a thick paste and then diluted with about four gallons of boiling water. Apply cool." It is certainly effective and will surely pay every orange grower if he will use it. Don't delay and wait for some "dead shot," but paste the bugs, and paste them right away.

TWO FRIENDS MEET.
"Hello! old fellow. What have you been doing to yourself? You look like a subject for the undertaker," exclaimed the man on the right.

"I have been taking mercury and potash mixtures until they have nearly ruined me," squeaked the old man on crutches.

"And I," said the other, "have been taking the genuine Swift's Specific, which has built me up from the first dose."

SWIFT'S SPECIFIC.

Nature's own remedy, made from roots gathered from the forests of Georgia. The method by which it is made was obtained by a half-breed from the Creek Indians, who inhabited a certain portion of Georgia, which was communicated to one of the early settlers, and thus the formula has been handed down to the present day. The demand has been increasing until a $100,000 laboratory is now necessary to supply the trade. A foreign demand has been created, and enlarged facilities will be necessary to meet it. This great

OUR NEIGHBORS.

Orange.
(Orange Tribune, Feb. 19.)
Pests the bugs.
Report says the fog is 10 inches deep in the Gospel Swamp.
Lumber scarce and the demand seems to be ahead of the supply.
Riparian rights have the best of it, and the price of gum boots is stiffening.
No mud in Orange. We can grow over any town in the county on the mud proposition.
The fall of rain in Orange, so far, this season, amounts to between six and seven inches.
Things grow in Orange soil. There is a Muscat grapevine at Mr. H. Grote's vineyard which grew 25 feet 5 inches last year. If anybody can hunt up a longer vine than that they can let us know.

Street lamps are being put up in all quarters. Mr. Pixley has placed one in front of his store on Glassell street, and Mr. Culver has had three more put up on Chapman street. Several more are talked of, and it will not be long before Orange's streets will be illuminated in good style.

Mr. Lamson and his plasterers are progressing as rapidly as possible with the work on the Palmyra Hotel. The damp weather delays the drying to some extent, but he will put it through as rapidly as it can be done, and will do a first-class job, too.

Some considerable prospecting is going on in the Silverado district, in the Santiago cañon, and some very flattering assays in silver are obtained. It is highly probable that some mines will be opened there at no distant day.

Superintendent Willis, of McPherson, got home from San Francisco a few days ago. He lost his "big dog" while in the Northern California, the boys wrecking that useful headgear with snowballs. He says that the looks of the tourists as they waded the snow in San Francisco was worth seeing.

"As cunning as a fox," is an old and trite saying, but it should be changed to "as cunning as a Modena." A Modena hen had a Modena chicken, and an old coyote visited their roosting place every night and carried one off. The Modena man provided himself with a dog, and the canine stood off the coyote for several nights, but then he changed his tactics. He brought another coyote with him, and while one of them engaged the attention of the dog, and coaxed him to follow him off, the other raided the hen-roost and carried off the pullet. When a Modena coyote wants chicken, he wants it bad.

Oriental Butter and Cheese.
Ben: Perley Poore writes thus in the American Cultivator: "Butter and cheese are frequently mentioned in the Bible, and Arabs and Syrians probably follow the old Hebrew style of dairy manufacture. The milk for butter-making is put into a copper pan, placed over a slow fire, adding a small quantity of sour milk, or the dried entrail of a lamb. After the milk is warmed through, and begins to curdle, it is poured into a goatskin bag, which is then tied to one of the ten poles, and kept constantly in motion for two hours; the butter then separates from the fluid part, and is placed by itself in another skin. In two days after it is again put into a pan and subjected to the action of a slow fire, with the addition of bourgoul (wheat boiled with leaven, and dried in the sun), and allowed to boil for some time, during which it is carefully skimmed. The bourgoul precipitates all the cheesy matter, and the butter then remains quite clear above. This butter is of a white color, and possesses a flavor not at all relished by Americans or Europeans, or, indeed, by any one accustomed to the use of butter made from cows' milk churned in the usual way. The cheese now made in Palestine is a very inferior article. The milk is curdled either by sour buttermilk or a decoction of the great-headed thistles, or wild artichoke. It is excessively salted; and when the cheese is made it appears in the form of small, round, white cakes, without rind, which soon become hard and dry throughout.

Papa and Mamma.
(Philadelphia Times.)
The promenade ground of the swell babies of Philadelphia is Rittenhouse Square, and every sunny afternoon they are out with their nurses in troops. A favorite birthday gift to a baby is a horn spoon, which is said to always bring "good luck."
Every fashionable baby has a variety of cute little zephyr sacsques, with roched shoes to match.
Careful mothers no longer permit everybody to kiss their babies promiscuously.
There is hardly a milkman in Philadelphia who does not leave a special kettle or two on his route exclusively for baby use.
The potato is now one of the most extensively used articles for baby food.
Doctors say that a good many of the crippled children of Philadelphia date their deformity to the carelessness of nurses in jolting them over street crossings.

Very elaborate christening robes are made of white silk trimmed with Valenciennes lace, but most babies have to be content with cambric.
The newest baby cribs are shell-shaped, with a canopy in imitation of that of Beatrice and Battenberg's noble cherub.
Stylish silver rattles are now made with the top shaped like a cat or dog's heads.
There has never been a time when the proper treatment of babies from a hygienic standpoint has been so scientifically discussed.

In Philadelphia, at least, few names ending in "ie" are now given to girl babies. Sensible, womanly names, such as Sarah and Margaret and Mary, are generally favored among even the most fashionable people.

BETSY AND I ARE OUT.

A Scorching and Scorching Farce in One Act.

Scene.—Editorial room of the Los Angeles Daily Betsy. Time, early evening, February 20, 1887.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ:
BETSY, a dead letter from Shearson, and editor of the D. B.
HARRIED T. ANGLISH, figurehead for the chief owner and business "manager."
CITY EDITOR, REPORTERS, GRAPEVINE EDITOR, FOREMAN, SMALL BOY, etc., by the company.

(BETSY discovered L. sitting at desk and writing with hysterical moans. CITY and GRAPEVINE EDITORS and REPORTERS working at other desks. Enter SMALL BOY with copy of THE TIMES.)

SMALL BOY: "Here, mister, here's THE TIMES you sent me after."

BETSY (turning pale and seizing the paper): "Ah! At last this much too bad sinking at my heart shall rest! I will know the worst! (Opens THE TIMES.) Ha! What! Great heavens, we are stabbed! Six columns of Associated Press dispatches! Here, you, sir! (To GRAPEVINE EDITOR.) What the devil do you mean, sir, by letting us get scooped like this? Here you only had half a column of dispatches, and, instead of padding them out in fine shape, you haven't worked in but a column of reprint as special to the D. B. What do I feed you for, sir? Here! Take that Bulletin and that Examiner and this Chicago Tribune, and cut out six columns of the local, put on good heads, mark each article, 'Special Dispatch to the D. B.' and send 'em in. We must make a bold front. I will write one of my weighty editorials about the incomparable superiority of the D. B.'s telegraphic service." (Writes.) "The superhuman brilliancy and enormous volume of the D. B.'s telegraphic dispatches grows more apparent daily. We regret to be obliged to say that THE TIMES hasn't half the quantity." "There; I fancy that will do."

(Enter HARRIED T. ANGLISH in state of great excitement.)

ANGLISH: "Say, there's a small boy out here, came in to pay for the paper for a week! Any of you got change for two bits?"

BETSY (laughing hysterically): "Ha! ha! I knew it would come! I knew it! Deacon, slip around and lock the front door, so our customer will not walk out. Then telephone to the police station that several persons have been already crushed to death in the rush of people to the D. B. office to subscribe, and ask 'em to send down 15 officers to keep back the crowd. Now we are saved again. I must advert in my editorials to this truly remarkable event."

(Writes.) "The boom of the D. B. is simply unparalleled, and our glittering phalanx of patrons grows oh so grandly."

We thought we were doing pretty well last week, when we amassed 20,000 new subscribers. But yesterday there were 3,000 new names enrolled on our books. Let doubters come and see for themselves.

(A loud rap is heard, and a collector walks in.)

COLLECTOR: "Is Col. Betsy in?"

(BETSY has concealed himself behind an umbrella in the corner.)

GRAPEVINE EDITOR: "He isn't in just now."

COLLECTOR: "Well, I'm getting devilish tired of coming around here after that $800 you owe Blank & Co. for paper. When can you pay me something?"

GRAPEVINE EDITOR: "Well, I really don't know. Col. Betsy will be in tomorrow, and he can tell you."

(Exit COLLECTOR. BETSY emerges from behind the umbrella, resumes his seat and THE TIMES. Turns to the first page, and a wild shriek escapes him.)

BETSY: "Oh! Gracious goodness! What's this? Here's a column and a half sensation. Three fakirs operated yesterday noon at the Pico House, the Courthouse and the haymarket, swindled the people out of $200 in an hour, and skip the town. Horrors! We didn't have a word of it. What's this at the end? 'By 1 p.m. the news had penetrated every corner of the city except the Express office! Just see how maliciously THE TIMES lies. We didn't hear anything about it, either, so there were two places the news didn't penetrate—and THE TIMES says there was only one. It is frightfully astonishing how some people can lie! But why didn't we hear of this big sensation? Mr. City Editor, what ails your reporters? Can't they find out anything? There was the gold brick excitement Thursday, you didn't have a line about, and THE TIMES had two columns. Then you didn't have anything about the sale of the San Gabriel Valley road; nor Vice-President Smith's important talk; nor the big excursion list; nor the reduction of county fees; nor the Pridham libel suit; nor the entries for the bicycle races; nor the postoffice news; nor the sensation in Judge Cheney's court; nor a word about the State Encampment of the G. A. R. which begins here tomorrow; nor the description of the new Baptist College; nor the real-estate news; nor the entertainments; nor quarter as much about the murder trial as THE TIMES did—and all this in three days. The only item you've had in that time that they didn't have was that a person of the female gender residing in a house of prostitution, which is unusual, of course, but not sensational. What in Chicago are your reporters doing?"

CITY EDITOR: "Well, sir, after we got scooped on that gold-brick racket, I did as you told me—gave one reporter a bed in the police station, so he could stay there all the time, and stationed the other at the telephone office. The rest of the town can look after itself pretty well. I think the reason the boys didn't get onto those matters was that the police didn't swear out a warrant and come and tell them the news. I'll burn up the Chief for this flagrant neglect of his duty."

BETSY: "See that you do. Give him Sheol. Meantime I will promulgate another editorial calling attention to the D. B.'s local news." (Writes.) "As our billions of readers know, the D. B. prints 3975 more columns of local news than any other journal in the universe. Every event that ever happened anywhere is daily chronicled in these columns. It grieves us to the heart's core to be forced to say that THE TIMES, during its whole existence, has never printed a single line of local news. We do not think this is the most best journalism."

(Enter ANGLISH wildly.)

ANGLISH: "Oh, Bet! We are ruined! An old lady came in just now and said her son had died of softening of the brain from reading your editorials. She was going to stop her paper. I tried to beg her not to, but she was implacable. She paid me for the month she owed and said to stop her paper. I said we would leave the paper at her house and collect for it whether she wanted it or not; but she said she was going to leave town and we couldn't find her. Oh, what shall we do? Now, when I was hunting elephants in Labrador with No. 10 shot, I—"

BETSY: "No! No! Let me die easy! Water! Water!" (Faints.)

Slow music. Curtain.

Couldn't Withstand It.

Dr. William D. Groton, from Northern California, a friend of Judge Hendricks, of the firm of Chapman & Hendricks, writes as follows: "Your letter is full of encouragement, and the copies of the New Year's edition of THE TIMES you sent finished the business. I am coming at once to look up a location and will then return to bring my family. Father is also anxious to come and will pull up as soon as I decide on a location."

Notary Public and Commissioner

For New York State and Arizona Territory, G. A. Robinson, 42 North Spring street.

Arlington Heights!

ON WASHINGTON ST., 100 FEET WIDE,

The Future Grand Boulevard from Los Angeles to the Pacific Ocean.

The plateau of ARLINGTON HEIGHTS offers the most magnificent view to be beheld in Southern California, embracing the whole of the Los Angeles Valley and extending from San Pedro and Santa Monica on the Pacific Ocean, across the plains to the foothills, and up to the snowy heights of the Sierra Madre Mountains. This tableland, or mesa, is perfectly level and unbroken, but 60 feet higher than the elevation of Spring or Main streets. To reach it there are no hills to climb, and as the streets leading from the center of Los Angeles city up to it follow the same even grade it is as easy of access as Washington Gardens. The soil of ARLINGTON HEIGHTS is a rich loam, mellow and friable at all seasons and easy to cultivate. The vineyards and orchards surrounding it give undisputed evidence that every acre of ARLINGTON HEIGHTS will produce grapes and fruit without irrigation. A stratum of purest well water is struck anywhere on the tract at a depth of from 30 to 60 feet. The plateau of ARLINGTON HEIGHTS is unequalled for health. A gentle breeze from the Pacific Ocean fans its daily; sea fogs never reach its elevation, and frosts being almost unknown on the "mesa," the most tender plants, such as tomato vines, bear fruit there every day of the year. The Santa Monica branch of the S. P. R. R. runs alongside this elegant tract; the present terminus of the electric street railroad is distant one-half mile from ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, and it is expected that it will be extended to and through ARLINGTON HEIGHTS. A free carriage is running from the electric road to ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, and the two-horse street-car line is now being extended through Washington street to an easy walking distance from this tract. The elevated plateau of ARLINGTON HEIGHTS terminates in a ridge or descent of 60 feet just south of Adams street, and in a similar ridge north of Pico street. On these ridges are located the most magnificent building sites in Los Angeles. No houses can ever be built high enough in front of them to obstruct that glorious view of mountain, valley and ocean; from Catalina Island to San Jacinto Peak, and down again over the broad acres, orchards and vineyards, of fair Los Angeles Valley, to the blue waves of the Pacific Ocean beyond the coast of Santa Monica. Whoever wishes for a beautiful home sheltered from the noise and bustle of a busy city, but within a twenty minutes' drive of the Plaza, should select in ARLINGTON HEIGHTS a lot of 5/8 acre whereon to build his house.

During the last few years it has occurred frequently that men have bought five or ten acres in Los Angeles, sold off one-half in lots for the price of the whole, and retained valuable grounds for a home, thus free of cost. Such chances are offered today in ARLINGTON HEIGHTS. The present owners, Dan McFarland, William H. Bonsall, Theodore Wiesen-danger, Messrs. J. P. and Edw. McCarthy, Turner and McBratney, purchased this large body of land at a low price; they offer it now in smaller tracts, or lots, at prices to suit all, and purchasers who make their selections now get all the benefit of a first choice for bargains in a vast tract of land. Every city has its one fashionable suburb, not too distant from the center of activity nor too near its noisy streets. ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, through a happy combination of advantages, promises to become what St. Cloud is to Paris, or Richmond to the city of London.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS hitherto was one vast body of land of nearly 700 acres. Our map shows a magnificent subdivision of it into 5 1/2-acre blocks, 600x300 feet, including streets, each containing 24 lots 50x150 or 200 feet, and each surrounded on all sides by streets 60, 80 or 100 feet wide. Investors who are able to appreciate the importance of a well-planned subdivision will foretell a great future to this tract, with its miles of wide streets, intersecting each other at right angles. The elegant towns and stately mansions of the rich will be found here within a short time, and purchasers who take advantage of our low prices and easy terms will reap a golden harvest of their investment in ARLINGTON HEIGHTS.
